The manuscript is missing folios at the end, and contains corrections. The genealogy of the author is mentioned in the first folio. It was copied during the 14th/20th century.
The manuscript is incomplete, some material being missing at the end. The copyist reached as far as the section entitled "ta'ālq al-talāq bi-talāq." In a very few instances, the text was copied by a different copyist; in this way, some parts of the book were copied by Abī al-'Azīz al-'Anqārī, whose script is well-known. Still other sections were copied by different individuals, although they are few in number. The copyist read the manuscript, which was written out during the 14th/20th century, in the presence of Shīkh al-'Anqārī. In addition, he added some corrections and additions to the text of varying lengths and in a random manner.
