Comments:
This fragment begins in the section on usury. "Bab al-ribâ" and continues until the section dealing with sworn allegations of adultery committed by either husband or wife, "Bab al-'inā", which is in turn followed by a few folios of the section on legal punishments, "baddāl", and the beginning of the section on jihad.
Folios 12, 29 and 46 are missing. In the text, important words have been written in red ink, and corrections have been added to the text.
The manuscript was copied during the 8th/14th century.

Title:
Sharh Mukhtasar al-Kharq (fragment)
Author:
Muhammad b. al-Husayn b. Muhammad
Abu Ya'la (d. AH 458/1063)
In several places in the manuscript, it is mentioned that it was an endowment (waqf), although the title of the work and the name of its author are unknown. However, it is certain that the text was written by Shaykh 'Abd Allah b. 'Abd al-Rahman Abulutayn and biographical dictionaries mention that he is the author of a work entitled "Sharh Kitab al-tawhid." The first folios of the work are missing. The copyist did not finish the text, having reached only as far as the section on those who deny predestination, "Bab minkirt al-qadr." It is possible that the manuscript is unfinished because the author never completed writing the book. Most of the content of the book or all of it was derived from the "Sharh" by Salaymân b. 'Abd Allâh. Indeed, this work may be an abridgement of Salaymân's; especially as it ends at 'Bab minkirt al-qadr" and contains corrections. The manuscript was copied in the 13th/19th century.
