LIST IN CHRONOLOGICAL ORDER OF ARTICLES, PAMPHLETS, REVIEWS, CUTTINGS, ETC.
LIST IN CHRONOLOGICAL ORDER OF ARTICLES, PAMPHLETS, REVIEWS, CUTTINGS, ETC.

THIS section is devoted to all the miscellaneous matter which has been written either by or about Burton, and which cannot take its place as a book in Part II. It includes all original articles written for periodicals and learned societies, together with the more important references and reviews of his travels, and other works, as well as reports of the meetings at which he joined in discussion. In addition to this there are a number of references to posthumous articles. Among these will be found accounts of the Burton "messages" and the séances at the mausoleum at Mortlake.

All these items are arranged in chronological order. The date given at the top of each reference is that of the issue of the particular volume or number of the publication in which the article appears, and not of the date when it was written or read. At the end of the chapter will be found, however, references to articles or letters in four papers, which are given under the heading of the paper in question, and are not included in the general chronological list. This is due to the fact that the number of references in each case is very large, and the actual nature of the references shows this to be the better plan.

The papers in question are the "Athenæum," the "Academy," the "Mining World," and "The Times." In the case of the two first the value of the references lies chiefly in the fact that they consist largely of reviews of Burton's books by eminent men of the day. Thus the reader will be able to compare the reviews given by the two papers, which should be very interesting as showing contemporary criticism.

The "Athenæum" has reviewed practically every book Burton ever wrote, beginning at "Goa, and the Blue Mountains," in 1851. The "Academy" was first published in 1869, and the reviews from this date onwards have been as complete as those in the "Athenæum."

Apart from reviews of his own books Burton reviewed several books himself in the "Academy." There are also numerous interesting letters both to the "Athenæum" and the "Academy"—all of which are recorded in these lists.

The letters to the "Mining World" will only interest a small percentage of readers, but they form an interesting preface to Burton's "To the Gold Coast for Gold." I have written a short introduction to this list which will help to explain the references. The last list consists of Burton's letters to "The Times." They are on very varied subjects and date from as early as 1855. A few references from the "Literary Supplement" are also added.

Although I have done my best to include in this chapter all Burton's letters and articles, I am afraid there are many gaps. So large was the number of papers and journals to which he contributed, sometimes under his own name, at other times using a nom de plume, and so many were the countries and languages in which he wrote that I have practically given up the hope of ever completing my list. For instance, I have only one reference of a letter to the "Times of India," and I have very good reason to believe that quite a number of contributions were made. Then as early as 1847-8 Burton sent various letters to the "Bombay Times," none of which I have been able to trace.

As a general rule obituary notices have not been included. There are, however, one or two exceptions, when the article is particularly long, or has been written by someone of importance, or by a relation or personal friend of Burton. Thus the articles by Miss Stisted and Commander Cameron are included.

Some explanation is necessary with regard to certain terms and abbreviations used in this section. In several cases I have used the words "off-print" and "reprint." Both booksellers and publishers use these words somewhat carelessly, and I would here define each and explain the sense in which I employ them. An off-print is an article or paper printed off from the same type used for its first appearance in some serial or journal. Nearly all learned societies have off-prints made of their more important articles. They are usually bound up in paper wrappings, sometimes re-numbered, in which case that portion of the type alone is altered, and in other cases retaining the actual numbering of the original article. Off-prints of learned societies usually consist of from five to thirty pages, but it so happens that two articles of Burton's are probably the bulkiest off-prints issued. These are the article in Volume XXIX of the "Journal of the Royal Geog. Soc.," and that issued in Volume XXIX of the same journal, dealing with the Itineraries of the second Khedival Expedition. In cases other than those of off-prints from the publications of learned societies, it sometimes happens that they have been off-printed at the request of the author for his own personal use. I consider that the pamphlet on Lord Beaconsfield is an example of this.

A reprint is a reproduction of matter that has already been printed and published. That is to say, the type is re-set. A good example of this is the small cardboard-bound book, "The Sentiment of the Sword," which was reprinted from the "Field." Another example is Burton's "Terminal Essay," of which fifty copies were printed (but not published) for private distribution. Occasionally curious cases turned up where both off-prints and reprints exist. Thus the "Ethnology of Modern Midian" originally appeared in the "Transactions of the Royal Society of Literature." Off-prints of the article were immediately made, but apparently Burton wanted further copies, and so he had it reprinted.
in Trieste. (A copy of this reprint is in the Kensington Library.)

With regard to the abbreviations employed, the general rule followed is that if a society or publication is mentioned only once or twice, the name is given in full, but in cases where it appears a number of times the names are only given in full the first time they are mentioned, but in all other cases they are abbreviated. Thus the "Journal of the Royal Geographical Society" becomes "Journ. Roy. Geog. Soc.," and the "Journal of the Anthropological Institute of Great Britain and Ireland" becomes "Journ. Anth. Inst."

On the outside cover of the Journal the second name of the dialect is spelt "Belochki."

ARTICLES, PAMPHLETS, REVIEWS, ETC. 197

1854.

Journey to Medina, with route from Yamba.

Publications of the Royal Geographical Society.

The Royal Geographical Society has from time to time issued publications bearing various titles, and a short list arranged chronologically, as far as possible, will be of assistance in looking up Burton's articles, as he contributed to the "Journal" and both series of the "Proceedings."

The Society was founded in 1830. Its publications are as follows:

The December 1932 number completes Vol. LX, two volumes being issued each year.
Supplementary Papers. 4 vols. 1882-93.

There were also numerous special publications, one of which was Burton's "Lands of Casambe."

Although not officially connected in any way with the Royal Geographical Society, there are a short series of publications, to which Burton contributed, which can well be mentioned here, as they were edited by the late Sir Clements Markham and are closely allied to the "Proceedings" of the Society.

Their titles are muddling, as there was really only one publication, which changed its title two or three times in as many years. It first appeared in 1872 as:

"Our Ocean Highways. The Monthly Geographical Record and Travellers' Register."

Vol. I covered the period April 1872 to March 1873.
Vol. II appeared in 1873. It bore the same title for April, May and June, but from July to the end of the volume (March 1873) the title was changed to:

"Ocean Highways: The Geographical Record."
SIR RICHARD FRANCIS BURTON

The title-page of this volume bears the altered name.
In 1874 a new volume, covering the period April 1873 to March 1874 came out, and was called Vol. I of "Ocean Highways: The Geographical Review."
The same year this merged into the "Geographical Magazine," of which five volumes appeared 1874-8.
The next year the "Proceedings of the Roy. Geog. Soc." commenced, and Sir Clements Markham's energies were concentrated on the work and publications of the Society.

1855.

Brief Notes relative to the Division of Time, and Articles of Cultivation in Sind; to which are appended Remarks on the Modes of Intoxication in that Province.

By Lieutenant R. F. Burton, 18th Regiment, Bombay N.I.; and the late Assistant Surgeon J. E. Stocks, Bombay Medical Establishment, Vaccinator in Sind.

Submitted to the Government on the 2nd of March 1848.

Bombay Government Records. No. XVII. New Series, Part II.
Miscellaneous information connected with the Province of Sind.
pp. [673]-696.

This article, to be chronologically correct, comes after that on the Population of Sind, but here I follow the actual order of the "Records."
A copy of this very rare article is in the Library of the Royal Geographical Society.

Burton refers to both articles (in chronological order) in a note in the "Nights," Original Edition, Vol. X, p. 200. The text on the same page shows that by mistake an earlier Report (de juridictione), specially written at Sir Charles Napier's request, was sent to Bombay with the other two. The result was that Burton was relieved of his duties and the report was in all probability burned.

ARTICLES, PAMPHLETS, REVIEWS, ETC. 199

1855.

Notes relative to the Population of Sind; and the Customs, Language, and Literature of the People; &c. &c.

By Lieutenant R. F. Burton, 18th Regiment, Bombay N.I.

Submitted to the Government on the 31st December 1847.

Bombay Government Records. No. XVII. New Series, Part II.
Miscellaneous information connected with the Province of Sind.
pp. [527]-637.

This is chronologically the earliest printed article by Burton I can find. It was written in 1847, but not issued till eight years later.
The Library of the Royal Geographical Society also has a copy of the above article. In April 1851 there were still a few copies of both articles at the India Office, but I believe the ones I bought were practically the last.

A Journey from El-Medina to Mecca down the "Darb el Sharki" on the Eastern Road (hitherto unvisited by Europeans) in September 1853.

1861.

Ethnological Notes on M. du Chaillu’s “Explorations and Adventures in Equatorial Africa.”

The numerous publications of the various anthropological societies have had so many different titles that a short explanation is really necessary to enable a reader to find the various articles mentioned in this chapter.

The Anthropological Institute of Great Britain and Ireland was formed in the year 1871 by the union of two societies—the Ethnological Society of London (founded in the year 1843) and the Anthropological Society of London (founded in 1863). Each of these societies issued publications under various titles, and as Burton contributed to most of them some elucidation is necessary. Since the union the title of the periodical issued by the Institute has remained unchanged, viz. “The Journal of the Anthropological Institute of Great Britain and Ireland.” The last volume of the Journal of the Institute to which Burton contributed was Vol. XVIII, 1889, the year before his death.

The complications, however, come in publications prior to 1871.

THE ETHNOLOGICAL SOCIETY OF LONDON.

As already stated, the Ethnological Society of London was founded in 1843, but it did not issue publications till 1848, when four two-yearly volumes were issued, known as “The Journal of the Ethnological Society.” The dates of these four volumes were 1848, 1850, 1854 and 1856.

Burton did not contribute to these.

In 1861 appeared the “Transactions of the Ethnological Society.” There were seven volumes, viz. 1861, 1863, 1865-9.

On the title-page they are called “New Series,” but this really refers to the fact that the Ethnological Society is issuing a new series of publications—the name of this one being “Transactions . . .” Burton contributed once to Vol. I and twice to Vol. III of these “Transactions.”

The last publication of the Ethnological Society was two volumes issued in 1869 and 1870, called “Journal of the Ethnological Society, New Series.”

Burton made no contribution to these two volumes.

The following year the Society amalgamated with the Anthropological Society of London, as already mentioned.
ARTICLES, PAMPHLETS, REVIEWS, ETC. 205

papers read before the "Institute," and formed what they called "The London Anthropological Society." It had no connection at all with the "Institute." Its publication was called "Anthropologia."
Only one volume, covering the years 1875-5, was issued. Burton contributed several papers to it.
The Society, however, was short-lived, because the breach was healed, and the "Institute" has remained a united body ever since.
License to use the word "Royal" was not granted till 1907.

1865.
Letter from Burton, being his contribution to the further discussion on Missionary work which took place on May 2nd, and which Burton was unable to attend.
pp. cccx-xccxii.

The Papers, Discussions and Correspondence with regard to missionary work in various parts of the world (but particularly in Africa) which occur in Vol. III of the "Journ. Anth. Soc., Ldn." afford most interesting reading. In order to follow Burton's remarks and the numerous allusions to him, the whole section of the Journal dealing with the subject should be read (i.e. pp. ccliv-xcciv).

1865.

The publication bearing the above title was issued in monthly parts at a price of 2s. 6d. a part, each of which contains details of the lives of three or four men. No. XXII contains notices on the Lives of Burton, General Evans, and Richard Partridge. The section on Burton stretches from pp. 72 to 78.

Letter on a Kjolkenmudding at Santos, Brazil.
pp. ccxiii-ccxiv.

[1866]?

8 pp.
Printed for private circulation.
Bound in white wrappers.
No author, publisher or date.
This was, in all probability, printed for Lady Burton.

ARTICLES, PAMPHLETS, REVIEWS, ETC. 273

As the title shows, the biography is divided into three sections.
The first has been described on a previous page in its original form.
The second was most likely an article from some London paper which appealed to Lady Burton, as among her books, etc., at Camberwell, are about a dozen reprints of it, under the title of "Memoir of Captain Richard Burton (Extracts from the Press)." It consists of a single 4to sheet folded into 5vo, with printing on only three sides. The third section needs no comment, as it explains itself.

This article was reprinted as Appendix II in Vol. I of "Unexplored Syria," 1872.

pp. [252]-294.

1871.

Zincograph copy of letter from Burton to Her Majesty's Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, written on October 16, 1871, and giving a full résumé of all the affairs in Syria that led to his recall from the Consulship of Damascus.

The copy is on folio paper, and the actual letter occupies seven full pages and a few lines. It affords most interesting reading, and, as the sequel showed, the recall was the culminating insult in Burton's career.

Enclosed in the letter to the Secretary of State were copies of numerous letters of appreciation from heads of villages, Bishops, Beduins, and people of all creeds and religions from all over Syria, expressing their unbounded regret at the sudden removal of Burton from the Consulship of Damascus after he had proved himself such an understanding and far-seeing Consul, the champion of the weak and an exposé of fraud.

These letters are thirty-four in number, and occupy twenty-nine foolscap pages, zincographed in the same way as the previous document.

The reading of these letters of appreciation is an education in itself, and the opening clauses will remind us of passages in the "Thousand Nights and a Night," for in Burton's day, as in the times of Haroun al-Rashid, the commencement of a story or letter was always worded with most elaborate and flowery eulogies. I will merely quote one which was received from His Highness the Amir Abd El Kadir. The opening clause is as follows —

"Allah favor the days of your far-famed learning and prosper the excellence of your writing, O wader of the seas of knowledge, O etern of learning of our globe, exalted above his age, whose exaltation is above the mountains of increase and our rising place, opener by his books of night and day, traveller by ship and foot and horse, one whom none can equal in travel.

To His Excellency Captain Burton.

But afterwards, verily we wondered at the suddenness of your departure, etc., etc. . . ."

Copies of the above letters can be seen at both the Kensington and Camberwell Libraries.

Anthropological Collections from the Holy Land, No. I.

By Richard F. Burton (late her Majesty's Consul at Damascus).

With Notes on the Human Remains.
By Dr. C. Carter Blake, F.G.S.

PP. 300-19.

Burton's article ends on p. 312. It has three plates.
Blake's article extends from p. 312 to p. 319. Its title on p. 312 is "Notes on Human Remains from Palmyra," with an illustration by George Busk, F.R.S.

Discussion. pp. 319-20.
The whole of the above was reprinted in Appendix I of "Unexplored Syria," Vol. II. 1872, pp. 226-258.
The plate of the "Bust of Zenobia" forms the frontispiece of the volume, and the other two plates are facing p. 240.
It will be noticed that a plate of flint flakes is added. It is out of its place, and should be among the plates of the second paper on "Collections from the Holy Land."

1872.

Anthropological Collection from the Holy Land, No. II.

ARTICLES, PAMPHLETS, REVIEWS, ETC. 219

By Captain R. F. Burton, F.R.G.S., late H.M.'s Consul at Damascus.

PP. 324-5.

The various collections are detailed in turn by Burton, and Blake describes the skulls and bones mentioned in the collections.
Thus Burton first (pp. 321-4) deals with Mr. Rattray's collection (1 plate).
This is followed by:
Description of portions of Skulls from Sahib el Zamá... from Mr. Rattray's Collection.
By C. Carter Blake...

pp. 324.
Burton then describes the bones found at Ma'alidah (pp. 325-9).
This is followed by:
Description of Skulls and other Remains from Ma'alidah, Syria, discovered by Captain Burton.
By C. Carter Blake...

pp. 329-30.
The next collection that Burton discusses is from the Dayr Mar Musa el Habashi (pp. 330-2).
On p. 332 is a note stating that Blake's notes on these remains are deferred. We find, however, that they were printed at the end of the volume (see pp. 418-21).
The next collection is from Homs (pp. 332-7).
Again there is a note saying Blake's notes are deferred. They appear on p. 422 of the same volume. The last collection is of flint implements from near Bethlehém (pp. 337-42). There is one plate, which is the same that was reproduced in "Unexplored Syria," Vol. II, where, as we have already seen, it was misplaced.
Blake made no comments on this paper, but there is a letter on the subject from John Evans (pp. 342-4).

Discussion. pp. 344-5.
The whole of the above was reprinted in Appendix I of "Unexplored Syria," Vol. II. 1872, pp. 238-305.
There are, however, one or two additions worth noticing:

(1) The plate of the plan of "Mortuary Cavern" has been freshly and much better drawn, and a general view of the cavern has been added on the same plate.
SIR RICHARD FRANCIS BURTON

(2) Three plates of flints and bones are added (facing p. 289).

1873.

Anthropological Collections from the Holy Land.
No. III, Notes on the Hamah Stones, with Reduced Transcripts. By Captain Richard F. Burton, F.R.G.S.

pp. 41-52.

This third (and last) paper on collections from the Holy Land consists of numerous small articles.
It is divided up as follows:

Burton’s paper on the Hamah Stones (with ten plates of transcripts) pp. 41-52.
Blake’s description of remains from Siloam. pp. 53-4.
Shall from near Siloam. Blake. p. 54.
Remains from Yabred. Blake —

The whole of the above was reprinted in "Unexplored Syria," part in Vol. I and part in Vol. II, as follows:

Burton’s paper on the Hamah Stones occurs in Vol. I, Appendix IV, pp. [332]-349. The ten plates are all reproduced, the first four being in inverted order and numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, and not 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5, 6, 7, 8 as in the "Journ. Anth. Inst."
There is also a note on the Hamah Inscriptions by Mr. Hyde Clarke, which has been added, as well as a letter to Burton on the same subject (pp. 349-60).

The other five papers mentioned above were reprinted in Vol. II as part of Appendix I. They appear on the following pages respectively: 345-7; 347-8; 351-2; 356-9; and (1) 370-3, (2) 374-7.

ARTICLES, PAMPHLETS, REVIEWS, ETC. 227

Burton’s paper on the Hamah or Hamath Stones led to numerous discussions, letters and suggestions. The Anth. Inst. published various notes on the subject, particularly on the origin and analogy of the phallic nature of certain of the Hamath Characters. The following are the notes in question —

The next note bore the same title, and appeared on pp. 446, 447 of the same volume. It is a letter from C. Staniland Wake.
Hyde Clarke contributed two more notes on the same subject.
(See "Journ. Anth. Inst.,," Vol. III, 1874, pp. 133, 136; and 326, 329.)
Finally, Dunbar Heath made some of the Inscriptions. (See "Journ. Anth. Inst.," Vol. IX, 1880, pp. 357 and 369-73.)

It should be remembered that neither the word "Hamath" nor "Hamath" is used to-day. A few years after the above papers were read Wright, Ward and Sayce suggested "Hittite" as a better word to describe the inscriptions, because no other North Syrian people loomed so large in ancient records as did the Hittites. The suggestion gradually became generally accepted.

Burton and Drake's early discoveries were followed by Sayce, Miss Bell, Ramsay, Oppenheim, Hogarth, etc., and it was discovered by the aid of the inscriptions that the Hittite Kingdom stretched not only over Northern Syria, but throughout Commagene, Cappadocia, Cilicia, Phrygia, and Lydia; i.e. over the whole of modern Asia Minor as far as Smyrna.

SIR RICHARD FRANCIS BURTON

Unfortunately this interesting article was not reprinted in the three new volumes to the "Encyclo. Brit." issued in 1922. In Volume 30, however, on pp. 377, 378, Dr. Hall gives interesting recent information on Hittite Archaeology, with a bibliography on p. 380. It will be noticed that three of the chief scholars on recent Hittite research (Professor Sayce, Dr. Cowley, and Mr. Campbell Thompson) are connected with the Burton Memorial Fund, the two former being on the Committee, and the latter Hon. Treasurer with Sir Frederick Kenyon, Director of the British Museum.

Burton says in the Introduction: "I have struck off, especially for the use of my friends, a few copies of the rejected matter." This refers to certain appendices to his "The Lands of Cazembe" which the Royal Geographical Society considered inadvisable to publish, owing to their being in the nature of controversy and criticism. The contents of this rare pamphlet are as follows:

SIR RICHARD FRANCIS BURTON

Tome Vingt-Huitième.
Quatrième Série—Tome VIII.
pp. 15-18.

The President, M. Henri de Salusure, after introducing Burton and giving a short résumé of his travels, called upon him to speak. Burton spoke chiefly on Mecca and Harar, but answered many queries on other parts of the world.
The above is a résumé of the whole proceedings.
