

THE NETHERLANDS

by

Jan Just Witkam

1991
PRELIMINARY NOTE

Although the general policy in this World Survey is to cover only collections of codices in the Arabic script, in the case of the Netherlands we have included some archival collections, and also Muslim MSS in other scripts (from Indonesia), because of their exceptional importance.—Ed.

UNION CATALOGUES & SURVEYS

Catalogue written in Latin. The last attempt to publish a comprehensive catalogue of Oriental MS. materials kept in public collections in the Netherlands. In the event, only the Middle Eastern materials were described. In 1877, it gave a complete survey of Middle Eastern MS. materials. The catalogue lays emphasis on the content of the texts and the identification of the authors. Occasionally, long quotations from the MSS are given. Almost no attention is given to codicological detail. The catalogue is arranged according to subject (vol. 1: encyclopaedias, grammar, lexicography, metrical art, rhetoric, letters, proverb, literature; vol. 2: poetry, cosmography, history; vol. 3: history (continued), arithmetic, astronomy, magic, alchemy, natural history, medicine, military science, falconry, music, philosophy; vol. 4: Qur'an and related sciences, Hadith, jurisprudence, politics, ethics, dogmatics, piety, prayers;
The Handlist is rigidly arranged. Per item it contains the title, the full name of the author with a bibliographical reference (usually to Brockelman’s Geschicht), with page or folio references, mention of earlier descriptions and the date of copying. In exceptional cases, the subject of the MS. is treated in a more comprehensive way. The Handlist is alphabetically arranged by title. Commentaries and glosses are given under the original work. It has an index of names of authors. Some 3,000 Arabic manuscripts are described.

Written in English. This large catalogue contains descriptions of all Javanese MS. materials in public collections in the Netherlands. It does not supersede the older catalogues of Javanese materials, however, since the extensive summaries of text are not repeated here, but only referred to. The total number of Javanese MSS described in this catalogue is approximately 6,000. More than two thirds of these are of Islamic content. The other texts originate from the pre-Islamic period of Java, or from regions of Indonesia where Islam never spread (such as Bali). Most of the MSS described belong to Leiden University Library.

The physical descriptions of the MSS provide information on the title, the author, the size, the alphabet used, the number of pages, and the number of lines to the page. The MSS are described according to the sequence of their class-marks, which roughly reflects the history of acquisition by the library. To each description in volumes 2 and 4 a short note on the content is added. Volume 1, and part

Islamic materials mentioned in this catalogue are in Arabic, Persian and Turkish. All Arabic materials are incorporated in the Handlist of 1957 (see below). For the Persian and Turkish materials, this is the most recent catalogue.

In Dutch. This is a catalogue of all Buginese and Makassarese MSS (from Sulawesi, Indonesia) in public and semi-public collections in Europe. Most of these belong to the Dutch Bible Society (pp. 1–84). Other collections of these materials in the Netherlands and mentioned in the catalogue are: The library of the Royal Institute of Linguistics and Anthropology, now in Leiden (pp. 84–86: ca. 200 texts), the Royal Netherlands Academy of Arts and Sciences in Amsterdam (p. 86: 2 texts), and the Zeeuwse Bibliotheek in Middelburg (pp. 86–89: 1 text).

The catalogue is centred on the contents of the MSS. Extensive summaries are given. Of the texts, usually the title, author, size, number of pages, script (Buginese or Arabic) and date of copying are mentioned.

Written in English, it contains a summary bibliographical reference to all Arabic manuscripts in public and semi-public collections in the Netherlands. All manuscripts previously described elsewhere are incorporated in this Handlist, which is still the most comprehensive bibliographical tool for research on Arabic manuscript materials in the Netherlands.
of volume 4, contain a history of Javanese literature based on the MS. collection. The extensive indexes in volumes 3 and 4 are yet another source of information concerning the Javanese collections in the Netherlands.

Photographic reprint of Vooihoeev’s catalogue of 1957 (see above) plus a number concordance.

Written in Malay. This is a Handlist containing short bibliographical references to all Malay manuscript materials in public collections in the Netherlands. Usually the title, the author, the number of pages, the script and a systematic code are given. At the end of the book is a cumulative index of titles.

Rijksuniversiteit te Leiden, Bibliothek (University Library)
Witte Singel 27, Leiden
(postal address: PO Box 9501, 2300 RA Leiden)
Curator of Oriental collections: Dr Jan Just Wiltam
Date of establishment: This is the library of the oldest state university in the Netherlands (founded in 1575). The library was founded in 1507.

Description of collection: From the very beginning of its existence, the study of Oriental languages in Leiden University has attracted Islamic manuscripts to its library. Famous collectors in the first century of its existence were J. J. Scaliger (died 1609), Jacobus Golius (died 1667) and Levinus Warner (died 1665). The Leiden library has continued to collect Oriental manuscript materials till the present day, and is the only public institution in the Netherlands still to do so.

In Leiden University Library are deposited the Oriental manuscript collections of a number of public institutions and private persons in the Netherlands.

Presently the Leiden library owns some 23,000 Oriental manuscripts which mainly originate from the Middle East (ca. 5,200) and Indonesia (ca. 15,000). Most Middle Eastern manuscripts are of Islamic content. Approximately one third of the Indonesian MSS are of Islamic content, the others being mainly Hindu and Buddhist.

Most Islamic languages are represented in the collection. In alphabetical order they are: Achehnese (Sumatra, Indonesia), Albanian, Arabic, Berber, Buginese and Makassarese (Sulawesi, Indonesia), Buru (Indonesia), Ceram (Indonesia), Fulbe, Ga-school (Sumatra, Indonesia), Hausa, Indonesian, Javanese, Kurdist, Madurese (Madura, Indonesia), Malay, Minangkabau, Pashto, Persian, Sasaki (Lombok, Indonesia), Sundanese (Java, Indonesia), Turkish, Urdu.

Being a state collection, the library provides constant care for the physical condition of the Oriental MSS. New acquisitions often arrive in a mediocrite state and are gradually being restored. The older collection is, on the whole, in good condition. A few of the MSS from Indonesia suffer from oxidation of ink, whereby the paper is gradually being destroyed. This process cannot, it seems, be stopped.

The Oriental collections of the Leiden library are, generally speaking, fairly well catalogued. A more detailed, chronologically arranged, survey of the published catalogues follows below. Apart from the printed catalogues, there is the Library's Oriental collections' inventory. It is kept by the Library's curator and, being an administrative instrument, it is not available to the public. Lists of recent acquisitions are regularly made available to visitors in the manuscript reading room. There are no unpublished catalogue data in the hands of private scholars.

All subjects are collected by the Library. The oldest dated manuscript from the Middle East was copied in 252 AH [866 CE]. There are earlier, but undated, Islamic materials in the library. The youngest Middle Eastern manuscript dates from the beginning of the 20th century. Manuscripts from Indonesia are usually not older than ca. 200 years.

The Library has a modest collection of microfilms (ca. 1,650 films) of Oriental manuscripts kept in other collections. Most of these are of Islamic materials. An unpublished list, which is regularly updated, is put at the disposal of visitors to the manuscript reading room.

The Library publishes, through Leiden University Press, a series of catalogues of manuscripts under the title Codices Manuscripti. It also maintains a collection of handbooks and manuscript catalogues in the Oriental MSS reading room, as a service to researchers of its MSS holdings. An effort is made by the Library to keep a record of publications made on the basis of its manuscript holdings.

Published catalogues:

There exists a bibliography of all published catalogues of the Leiden library:

1989. Bibliografie van gedrukte catalogi betrekking hobbend op het bezit van de Universiteitsbibliotheek te Leiden en de daarop opgenomen bruikleen. By J. E. F. ten Beer. Leiden: Universiteitsbibliotheek (Kleine publica-

The Leiden library has published its catalogues from the beginning of the 17th century onwards. In most of these catalogues Islamic MS. materials are described. All older catalogues have been superseded by the catalogues published in the 19th and 20th centuries and are, therefore, left out of this survey since they are no longer of any use for access to the collections. Moreover, several of the older MS. collections of the library were reorganized in the 19th century and the references in the pre-19th-century catalogues are usually not valid.

1820. Specimen catalogi codicum MSS orientalium Bibliothecae Academae

Written in Latin. This a specimen volume of an extensive catalogue. The project never went beyond this volume, however. In 11 paragraphs, the author treats a number of Arabic texts which are contained in some 30 MS. volumes. No attention is given to codicological detail at all. Only the content of the text is treated, with extensive quotations and annotations.

1851 – 77. See the union catalogue by Doxy et al.

Islamic materials mentioned in this catalogue are in Arabic, Persian and Turkish. All Arabic materials are incorporated in the Handlist of 1957. For the Persian and Turkish materials, this is the most recent catalogue.

In Latin. This catalogue contains descriptions of all Oriental manuscripts belonging to the Royal Academy (Koninklijke Nederlandse Akademie van Wetenschappen) in Amsterdam, now deposited in Leiden University Library. Islamic materials are in Arabic (148 MSS), Persian (26 MSS), Turkish (37 MSS), mixed content (2), Malay (8 MSS), Buginese (2 MSS) sections. The larger sections are subdivided according to subject-matter.

Contains provisional descriptions in French, with quotations in Arabic of 664 Arabic manuscripts. It is in fact a sales catalogue of Messrs. Brill of Leiden, but the entire collection was purchased in 1883 by Leiden University. A recent article on this sale is:

The catalogue is almost devoid of bibliographical details. Usually the author and title of a work are given, and sometimes short quotations from the colophon as well. No bibliographical references are given, nor has the author spent much effort in identifying the anonymous works. After all, it was only intended as a bookseller’s catalogue. The subjects of the texts are usually summarized in a few words. The catalogue does not contain an index of any sort. The MSS received new numbers when they entered the library. A more up-to-date identification of the MSS described in this catalogue is contained in the Handlist of 1957 (by P. Voorhoeve).

Catalogue of Arabic MSS, written in Latin, with titles and quotations in Arabic. Emphasis in the descriptions is laid on the contents of the texts described. These 2 volumes were intended as the beginning of a large catalogue of Arabic MS. materials in the Netherlands, but the project was never completed. The catalogue by J.J. Wiet (1983 –[1989]) is the first attempt since this catalogue to describe the Arabic MS. materials in the Netherlands. The catalogue gives for each text or MS. the title, the name of the author, the subject-matter and the date of compilation. Sometimes other details, such as the date of copying, are given as well. There are no indexes, but searching is facilitated by the fact that the MSS are described according to subject. The total number of MSS described is approximately 200. All MSS mentioned in this catalogue are incorporated in the Handlist of 1957.

Written in Dutch. This catalogue contains the descriptions of ca. 450 Javanese and ca. 25 Madurese MS. volumes. It must be borne in mind that the Javanese MSS in the collection do not exclusively contain Islamic materials. Numerous MSS contain texts from the pre-Islamic period of Java. There is no separate listing of Islamic Javanese materials. The same is valid for the Madurese MSS. The catalogue is arranged according to subject-matter. Much attention is given to the contents of the texts, much less to the physical description of the volumes. Usually title, author, number of pages and bibliographical references are given.

Written in Dutch. The catalogue contains the descriptions of ca. 320 Malay MS. volumes and of ca. 14 Sundanese MS. volumes. All attention is devoted to the contents of the texts. Details given are: title, author, size, number of pages, date of compilation and copying, and bibliographical references. Extensive summaries of the texts are given. The arrangement of the catalogue is according to subject.

Written in Dutch. In this large collection of mostly Hindu-Javanese materials, the Sasak MSS (from the isle of Lombok) are sometimes of Islamic interest. There is no separate list of MSS of Islamic contents. The catalogue is arranged according to the titles of the texts. Extensive summaries and lengthy quotations are given. The basic bibliographical elements of the MSS are usually given: title, size, number of pages; but the emphasis is laid on the contents of the texts.

Written in Dutch. Supplement to the catalogue by Vreeke (1892). This catalogue contains the descriptions of ca. 1,200 Javanese and ca. 100 Madurese texts in approximately as many MS. volumes. The catalogue also contains references to the Javanese and Madurese MSS of the Dutch Bible Society in Haarlem and the MSS in the collection of the Bataviase Genootschap van Kunsten en Wetenschappen (now: Museum Pusat, Jakarta, Indonesia). It must be borne in mind that the Javanese MSS in the collection do not exclusively contain Islamic materials. Numerous MSS contain texts from the pre-Islamic period of Java. There is no separate listing of Islamic Javanese materials. The same is valid for the Madurese MSS. The catalogue is arranged according to subject-matter. Much attention is given to the contents of the texts, much less to the physical description of the volumes. Usually title, author, number of pages, size of the MS., and bibliographical references are given. Mention is made of the scripts used in the MSS: Javanese, Pegon (derived from Arabic script) and Latin script.

Written in Dutch. Several of the Sundanese and Sasak materials are of Islamic interest. Some 127 Sundanese and 40 Sasak MSS are described. Attention is focused on the contents of the texts. Usually title, author, number of pages, size of the MS., and bibliographical references are given. Mention is made of the scripts used in the MSS: Javanese, Pegon (derived from Arabic script) and Latin script.

Written in Dutch. Intended as a supplement to Juynboll’s catalogue of 1899. The catalogue, which is arranged according to subject, contains the summary descriptions of 503 Malay texts and of 264 Minangkabau texts. Title, author, size, number of pages, number of lines to the page, date of compilation and copying are given.
Extensive summaries of the contents of the texts are added.

1931. Exposition de manuscrits orientaux, d’objets et documents relatifs à l’histoire des études orientalistes à l’Université de Leiden organisée à l’occasion du XVIIIe Congrès international des Orientalistes au Musée du “Lakenhal”

This exhibition catalogue contains a summary description of 81 Middle Eastern and Indonesian MSS in the University Library, all of which are described in previously published catalogues.

1952. Indonesische handschriften in de Universiteitsbibliotheek te

Contains an alphabetical list of Indonesian languages which are represented in the Leiden manuscript collection. Materials of Islamic interest may be found under: Acehnese, Buginese and Makassarese, Buru, Ceram, Gajoland, Javanese, Madurese, Malay, Minangkabau, Sasak and Sundanese. Written in Dutch.

1957. See the union catalogue by Voorhoeve.

Includes Arabic MSS of the Royal Academy as well as the University Library itself.

Exhibition catalogue of the municipal museum ‘De Lakenhal’ in Leiden, showing treasures of the Leiden University Library (2–25 June 1967). The section on Oriental MSS (pp. 35–39) was compiled by R. Roelvink.

The catalogue, which is written in Dutch, contains some general information on 20 Oriental MSS. Of these, nine MSS are of Islamic content (in Arabic, Persian, Turkish, Javanese, Malay).

1967–80. See the union catalogue by Pigoubert.

Most of the Javanese MSS described belong to Leiden University Library; there are also two belonging to the Royal Academy (vol. 2,
p. 712), some 31 belonging to the Gemeentelijk Museum voor Volkenkunde in Delft (vol. 2, pp. 757–761) and 64 owned by the Rijksmuseum voor Volkenkunde (vol. 2, pp. 810–818), on permanent loan to the University Library.

1970. Levinus Warner and his Legacy. Three centuries Legatum War-neriannum in the Leiden University Library. Catalogue of the Commemorative Exhibition held in Bibliotheca Thysiana from April 27th till May 15th 1970.

Exhibition catalogue, in English, containing two introductory articles: pp. 1–31: The Legatum Warnerianum of Leiden University Library, by G.W.J. Drewes; pp. 33–44: Warner’s manusscripts and books in the main printed catalogue, by P.Sj. van Koningsveld.

Then follow the descriptions of 60 items from Warner’s collection of Oriental MSS and printed books or of materials relating to Warner. They include Arabic, Persian and Turkish texts. The codicological details are not very extensive, but each description contains a summary of the contents of the works mentioned with some bibliographical details about their authors. The descriptions are not written for the specialist, but rather for the interested general public. The work is valuable because it contains a number of photographic reproductions taken from the exhibited materials.

1973. The Arabic manuscripts collection of René Basset (1855–

Written in English. Summary description of René Basset’s MS, collection in the Leiden University Library. All MSS are more extensively described by J.J. Wikram (1983–[1989]).

1974. Ten Arabic manuscript-volumes of historical contents acquired by the Leiden University Library after 1957. By P.Sj. van Koningsveld. Studies on Islam. Ed. E. van Donzel. Amsterdam:
Royal Academy of Arts and Sciences. Pp. 92–110; with illustrations.

Ten recently acquired Arabic MSS are described in this article.
Details given: name of author, title, bibliographical reference, date of compilation and copying. Extensive attention is given to qirāʿāt and similar features.

Intended as a proposal for a palaeographical atlas of Arabic, it may also be considered as a catalogue of 7 Arabic MSS in the Leiden University Library.

Incl. list of Persian MSS extracted from published catalogues.

1980. See the union catalogue by Voorhoeve.

In the 1980 edition no new acquisitions have been added. The difference between the 1957 and the 1980 edition lies in the extensive number of concordances which accompany the latter. A few obvious misprints in the 1957 edition have been corrected, but the works are basically the same. On pp. 605–608 is a survey of the Arabic MSS of the Royal Academy (deposited in the University Library).

A short general introduction to the main catalogue of Arabic MSS in the Leiden library. It is treated: the present state of Arabic bibliography, Arabic manuscripts in the Library of the University of Leiden and other collections in the Netherlands and the method of the catalogue. No MSS are described in this separately-published booklet.

Written in Dutch. The catalogue contains the descriptions of the 150 Sundanese MS. volumes which were collected in Java by C. Snouck Hurgronje (died 1936) before 1908. Most MSS were commissioned by Snouck Hurgronje and date from the end of the 19th and the beginning of the 20th century. The catalogue focuses attention on the contents of the texts described. Long summaries and extensive quotations are given for each text. The codicological detail is restricted to title, author, size, date of copying, former owner or scribe.

The catalogue describes the MSS in great detail. Mentioned are not only title, complete name of author with relevant bibliographical references, subject, language, date of compilation, name of scribe, style of script, date and place of copying, but also all sorts of details concerning the physical appearance of the MS, such as writing materials, type of ink, watermarks etc. The fascicules have a consecutive numbering and a cumulative index is foreseen for every 7 or 8 fascicules. In the meantime, each fascicule is provided with a provisional index of titles and names of authors. In the first 5 fascicules published some 300 MSS are described, which contain more than 1,000 bibliographical entries. This catalogue describes parts of the Leiden collection which have not been described in earlier catalogues. Eventually it will contain a description of all Arabic MSS in the Netherlands. The catalogue is abundantly illustrated.

Exhibition catalogue, written in Dutch, published on the occasion of the first centenary of C. Snouck Hurgronje’s journey to Mecca. Some 60 Arabic manuscripts, archival materials, photographs and ethnographical objects are described. Very summary descriptions. The catalogue contains also a survey of other Islamic collections of
C. Smouck Hurgronje, which are preserved in the Leiden library. The ethnographical objects were loaned from the State Museum of Ethnography in Leiden.

   On pp. 16–66 and 75–90, some 1,200 Malay MS. texts belonging to the Leiden University Library are mentioned; on p. 74 is one Malay MS. deposited by the Royal Academy.

   Written in Dutch. The catalogue of the exhibition held on the occasion of the fourth centenary of Leiden University Library. The exhibition had as its central theme scholarly and scientific illustration. Islamic MS. materials are mentioned throughout the text: in all approximately 10 MSS in Arabic and Persian. The often extensive descriptions are subject to the exigencies of the exhibition’s theme. Apart from author’s name, title, number of folios, date of completion and of copying and a bibliographic reference, no further technical information is supplied.

   Written in Indonesian. This is a survey of all Sundanese MSS in public collections in the world. The Leiden University Library is treated on pp. 181–425. Quite confusingly, the few Sundanese MSS in the library of the Royal Institute of Ethnology and Linguistics in Leiden are treated there as well, as if they belonged to the University Library. In all, 785 Sundanese texts are mentioned. For each text is given: title, library number, original collector, number of pages, type of alphabet, language, type of text (prose, poetry), indication of subject-matter. The survey is devoid of indexes of any kind. This volume is the commercial edition; a privately-published mimeographed edition appeared under the same title (Bandung, 1983, vi + 512pp.).
